

Anne Pinkman Bio

Anne Pinkman is currently Programme Manager for Scotland & Northern Ireland with the Prison Reform Trust, she works on their programme for women who offend. Anne is also Convenor of the Scottish Working Group for Womens Offending, a Group she established in 2011. Previously Anne was Chief Officer with Fife and Forth Valley Community Justice Authority. She moved into that post following a lengthy period working in criminal justice social work, working both in prison and community settings. From 1998 to 2009 she was Head of Criminal Justice Services with Stirling Council. There she had responsibility for the provision of social work to Cornton Vale. Annes time there coincided with the publication of Women a Safer Way in 1998 and was in many respects the beginning of her interest and passion in working with women who offend.
